Annotation. The problem of divorce remains one of the most pressing problems of society at the moment. The presence of family divorces also attracts the attention of the general public in our republic and encourages us to take the necessary measures to find a solution to this problem. Because, as already mentioned above, as a result of the divorce, millions of people — first of all, children, women, men and even the relatives of the divorcees—receive "spiritual prosperity".

At the present stage of the development of mankind, at the same time when the daily life of people is urbanized from day to day, a wide range of scientific and technical progress is being made at the same time, there is an increase in the number of maternal diseases, child mortality, the birth rate of vulnerable, disabled children, the deterioration of maternal and, since they are still able to build a family, in addition to their comprehensive training in family life, they are required to provide them with a timely and high level of scientifically-based knowledge about the birth of children in the family and related issues. In general, this issue is not a problem that arose yesterday or today. It is one of the dilapidated problems associated with the history of mankind, the emergence of marriage-family relations.

Key words: Family, divorce, marriage, couple problem, negative consequences, child education, child, loneliness.

For centuries, state support for the family, ensuring its stability as the main link in society in all aspects was considered one of the priorities of our society. Therefore, since a nation consists of certain families, its stability and family harmony are the main factors determining the development and prospects of the country. In this era of rapid development of globalization, science and technology, it is the duty of each of us, even each of us, to maintain a family based on legal marriage. Yes, this is not just a domestic issue that can be censored, like mine or yours in families; it is literally an extremely important event for the future of society and the state, for the continuity of generations. The family should be sacred and inviolable not only in the literary process - in the pens of writers, on the canvas of the painter, in the roles of film actors on the screen and on the stage, but also in deeds. Yes, the family will remain sacred to Uzbekistan. Otherwise it can not be. But despite this, the number of family divorces is increasing.

Today, material and spiritual support for families, assistance to young families is carried out at the expense of state and non-state funds. Some state bodies are engaged in providing financial support to families, providing them with financial assistance from the state. Citizens' self-governing bodies - mahallas - play an important role in supporting families and facilitating the resolution of family disputes. But in modern society, this can no longer be a serious obstacle to the number of decisions. Quite often, families, spouses or other family members try to hide their problems, try not to disclose them or refrain from solving them because of distrust of state bodies, neighborhood committees. As a result, small problems become big, and as a result, family conflicts and disputes arise, and ultimately divorce.

Divorces between spouses are mainly caused by various disagreements, lack of understanding between spouses or many other socio-economic factors. It must be admitted that even in cases where it is possible to save a family, inefficient methods, such as the imperfection of the law and the intransigence of the parties, are the reason for the divorce of spouses. Today, the problem of fulfilling family obligations is one of the most important issues in family relations. The number of divorces is increasing due to the failure of spouses to fulfill their family obligations. We can say that the reason for this is that the current Tax Code does not establish special measures of responsibility for failure to fulfill family responsibilities. Therefore, it would be advisable to include in the UK a rule that failure to fulfill family obligations entails legal liability. Based on this, we believe that it may be necessary to form legal norms on the application of measures of administrative responsibility in this regard. Another cause of family conflicts can be considered the negative interference of third parties in maintaining the stability of young families. Despite the fact that the Family Code provides for “non-interference in family relations” (Article 3), the number of divorces is increasing due to arbitrary interference in young families by mothers-in-law and other relatives. As a solution to these issues, family laws and their application should strengthen the family and its place in society, the mutual responsibility of family members for the maintenance of the family and the upbringing of children, the protection of minors from various negative influences, it is necessary to provide a clear norm regarding the focus on ensuring protection. In many cases, the cause of divorce is also the abuse of the rights of a person arising from family relations. We have also seen that the rule that a husband and wife cannot abuse the rights arising from family relations in relation to each other is not expressed in the current code. In this regard, it is advisable to include in the Family Code a provision that spouses, including other family members, are obliged to abide by the law, respect the rules of joint marriage, moral principles, act in good faith and honestly in the exercise of their rights and obligations arising from family relations.

It is important that the initiative in the breakdown of marriage was mainly in the hands of a man. The marriage was doomed, if he wanted it. It is known from ancient history and old films that if a holy woman took the initiative, she was severely punished, condemned by the public, and even stoned. In ancient China, the reasons for divorce were disobedience to the opinion of the husband's parents, the objection of the bride, adultery, infertility, adultery, an incurable disease, jealousy. However, despite the above circumstances, if a woman mourned her husband's parents or was really an orphan, the husband could not kick her out of the house. Even in our holy religion, the issue of divorce, which leads to the breakup of the family, is assigned to the man; in fact, the goal is to prevent the breakup of the family.

The problem of divorce is one of the most important social problems of modern human society. Therefore, both abroad and in Uzbekistan, the study of the problem of divorce is given the attention of the scientific community. This problem is dealt with by specialists in various fields: lawyers, demographers, economists, sociologists, psychologists and specialists in other fields of science. Their attention is focused on studying the causes, factors, motives of this phenomenon, their elimination, and reducing the negative complications of divorce. Because because of the breakup of families, not only a divorced couple and their children suffer greatly, but also society. Divorce causes a lot of unpleasant phenomena: an increase in the number of dysfunctional families, an increase in delinquency among children and adolescents, an increase in the number of children left without pedagogical supervision, loneliness, deterioration of relations between former spouses and relatives.

Raising children in dysfunctional families. Speaking of a dysfunctional family, it should be emphasized that dysfunctional families also happen in different ways. Families can become dysfunctional due to the death of one of the spouses or their divorce. Of course, the death of a father or mother in a family is a great tragedy, first of all, this tragedy should not happen to anyone, but in such families, respect for the spirit of the deceased, a positive attitude towards him and his honor are preserved. However, in dysfunctional families caused by the separation of spouses, there are “living” orphans. Firstly, the "living orphan" is more stigmatized in society, especially in children's groups (kindergarten, school, peer group). Secondly, in such families, relationships are formed by the father or mother, their relatives, who give a negative connotation to the honor of the former spouse and his personality. Former spouses are more likely to criticize each other. This, of course, is the basis for a number of troubles in the formation of relations in families of this category. 4 Divorce affects not only divorced couples, but also children left without a father as a result of divorce. Divorce, in particular, has a strong negative impact on the feelings of a girl growing up without a father, on her love for her father, on the image of a father formed in a girl, on the psyche of a girl growing up without a father. father. And this can show its complications not only in the girl's childhood, but also in the future, when she will build a family. According to the results of many studies and this is scientifically confirmed, a girl who does not have enough love and respect for her father will not be able to show enough respect for her husband in the future when she starts a family.

In this article, several views are put forward on the personal activity of a gifted child, as well as the formation and implementation of individual talent on the basis of which the psychological mechanisms of self-development of the lying person are important.

Now studying scientific heritage, socio-political activities and acquaintance youth charity of our above-stated ancestors is considered one of the main urgent objectives of the modern intellectuals.

Uzbekistan has a rich experience of political life, features of political consciousness and develops in unique and difficult conditions. Thus, it turned out that it is wrong to copy a simple copy of the political experience of the Western world.

Conclusion: In conclusion, although in different ways, reducing the number of divorces between spouses, strengthening the mechanisms for maintaining the integrity and stability of families, strengthening the reforms carried out in this regard, is not only the need of the hour, but at the moment, you are our main task.
