Annotation. One of the pressing issues today is the formation of children's respect for values through an impactful social institution as a family, through which a positive moral relationship with the family is formed. We tried to give an opinion in the article on the case when we took into account these peculiar qualities...

Key words: stable and strong family, the family is the eternity of life; the family is the main link of society, the family and educational institutions.

First of all, in these reflections of the first President, the unique role of the family in the education of faith and a healthy worldview was emphasized. Therefore, at the heart of all educational work related to the upbringing of children in the family and neighborhood system is the task of studying patterns associated with the fundamental essence of folk traditions, family interactions, and national values. It depends on the practical implementation of the results obtained in the study of their socio-psychological state. Because in order to create a stable and strong family, it is necessary to strengthen family traditions, rethink national traditions, taking into account the requirements of the time, and develop effective means of spiritual and moral education of our rarest youth.

Today, through such an influential social institution as the family, one of the most pressing issues is the formation of children's convictions in such values, and thus the formation of a positive moral attitude towards the family. Establishing spiritual and moral relations in this shrine and educating a person through it so that he becomes a perfect person with healthy convictions and new thinking is a matter of national importance in today's era of reforms.

In order to further enhance the role and participation of the family in the development of society, strengthen state support and consistently improve the legal, socio-economic, moral interests and well-being of the family, 1998 was declared the Year of the Family in the Republic of Uzbekistan. Based on this, a state program was developed on measures to ensure the interests of the family. Under the Committee of Women and Girls of the Republic of Uzbekistan, the Republican Scientific and Practical Center "Family" was established. The "Family Code" of the Republic of Uzbekistan, dedicated to the legal regulation of family life issues, was adopted. The promulgation of the "Family Code", a marriage contract new for the legislation of Uzbekistan, kinship and origin of children, agreements on the payment of alimony, the rights of children in the family and important provisions of parents, such as obligations for material support, protection of the rights and interests of children deprived of parental care, have great importance in the legalization of moral culture in family education, in the creation of legal foundations.

Indeed, raising a child is a very delicate process. First, the teacher must have a specific goal. Democratic and humanistic ideas, legal thinking based on the superiority of our national values, ideas of national independence in spiritual nutrition, instilling love for work - all this is coordinated in education. However, parents who are considered family educators, kindergarten educators, local civil society, school teachers and senior officials of juvenile affairs inspectorates should also bear responsibility for education. Otherwise, a small problem can cause great discord in families and make them lose faith in life. Of course, the main places of socialization, i.e. school, district and social activities play a role in shaping the consciousness and worldview of a person. However, despite this, family relations determine the basis of the social orientation of the child. In this place, the great scientist and thinker of our countryman Abu Ali Ibn Sina is one of the figures who spread creativity in almost all areas of science. Rejecting the views of the ancient Greek philosopher Plato that "Education should be organized by the state", in his work "The Concept" he emphasizes the primary responsibility of parents for the upbringing of the child. At the same time, the scientist emphasizes that fathers and mothers should be knowledgeable, virtuous and have a broad outlook, showing that there is no more responsible work than raising children. It is no secret that the mother is often considered the main person responsible for the upbringing of children in the family. The great Russian scientist Jean-Jacques Rousseau said that "Early education is more important than anything else, and it is undoubtedly the responsibility of women." The higher the breadth of the mother's outlook, spiritual and educational wealth, legal literacy, ideological education, knowledge of religious knowledge, knowledge of the natural and social sciences, in a word, her intellectual potential, the higher will be the future opportunities of her child.

Smart, beautiful women with their care, kindness, generosity of spirit maintain balance, purity, honesty, sincerity and justice in the family and throughout society.

It is known that any child is gifted in some aspect. First of all, it is up to mothers to realize the child's abilities, that is, talent, to bring him to the surface and give him the right direction. Because only they communicate more with the child. The mother is responsible for the development of literacy, moreover, a small child trusts the mother more. A wise woman plays an important role as a communicator between father and children, and also has a great responsibility for the health of the family environment and upbringing. He tells his children how much they need a father who is the backbone of the family, that they should not look him directly in the eye, that they should always keep a distance between themselves and their father, and a series of similar words of respect. He informs the father about the needs of the children. Indeed, in our values, the share of the father is very high. No wonder they say old sayings like "The father pleases God willing" or "Do not even go to the roof of the house where your father sleeps." This is one of the most important aspects of the educational process according to our traditions. The ancient Roman philosopher Epictetus says: A father's strictness is a wonderful medicine: it is more sweet than bitter. Of course, the principle and strictness of the father in the family will accustom the child to discipline. A disciplined little child does not shy away from work and completes the tasks assigned to him on time. Each case is approached responsibly.

It should be emphasized that a very relevant and important task is a clear knowledge of the socio-psychological factors and conditions that ensure the formation of spiritual and moral relations among young people and the inculcation of concepts related to worldview through family traditions, paintings and customs. . . . Young people feel the need to know the meaning and essence of the world, its secrets, family and marriage, the values associated with family and human relationships, not just to know, but to instill in their hearts as faith. But at the same time, conflicts and incorrect stereotypes can form, bad habits and skills can form. In this place, the health of the family environment, the compatibility of ancient values with the principles of national and universal spirituality serve as the basis for the development of a healthy worldview and family qualities in every boy and girl. After all, the formation of ideological immunity among young people, especially among adolescents, in relation to other people's ideas, in relation to directions that contradict the norms of social behavior, in their correct perception of the most advanced ideas, the sanctity of the role of the family in society and education in the concepts of Motherland and Motherland according to is essentially a pedagogical task.

In this article, several views are put forward on the personal activity of a gifted child, as well as the formation and implementation of individual talent on the basis of which the psychological mechanisms of self-development of the lying person are important.

Now studying scientific heritage, socio-political activities and acquaintance youth charity of our above-stated ancestors is considered one of the main urgent objectives of the modern intellectuals.

Uzbekistan has a rich experience of political life, features of political consciousness and develops in unique and difficult conditions. Thus, it turned out that it is wrong to copy a simple copy of the political experience of the Western world.

Conclusion: It is also necessary and important that parents have a certain level of pedagogical knowledge. The main idea of cooperation between the family and educational institutions is the pedagogical support of parents.
